

The role of committees in the HTA

HTA committees and our Council play a vital role in representing the interests of our members and ensuring that the activities and projects we undertake deliver value for members. They are made up of volunteers from HTA member businesses and meet three to four times a year. Their role is to provide the teams at the HTA with advice and feedback on activities being undertaken by the HTA to make sure that they deliver value to members, and the committees also suggest and propose projects and activities for the HTA to consider taking forward. Our committees are also a route through which members can raise questions and suggestions for discussion with the team at the HTA.

Volunteering on a committee is a great way to build up knowledge, connections, and influence in the industry, as well as making a contribution to the collective good of the industry. We particularly want to see participation on our committees from as wide a cross-section of our industry as possible, and are doing everything we can to support diversity and inclusion on our committees.

If you're already serving on one of our committees, thank you for the contribution. If you're interested in joining one of our committees, please contact gandc@hta.org.uk and we can provide you with more information.
